Mava Java Delayed Until Fall

Ana Merizalde

Staff Writer

UNO's version of "Central Perk," originally scheduled to open in April, won't arrive until next fall.

Construction on Mava Java, the coffee house to be built in the food court of the Milo Bail Student Center (MBSC), was slated to begin March 22. However, a lack of proper plumbing will delay the construction until late summer.

"I wanted to let you know that we will not be able to open our proposed coffee house after spring break as we had hoped," said Guy Conway, director of the Student Center, in a letter to Student President/Regent Jon Shradar.

"To bring over the espresso machine we need to not only add an additional power and water line, but also a sink and a drain, which is required by the department of health," Conway said.

Mava Java is now scheduled to open the first day of the fall 1999 semester.

Conway said putting more time into the project will benefit both students and the MBSC.

The coffee house will be sectioned off from the rest of the food court, creating a relaxing atmosphere for students. It

Memorial Scholarship Awarded

LaTrina Parker

Staff Writer

The 1998-1999 R.H. "Rick" Davis Memorial Scholarship was awarded to eight minority high school students for their academic achievements.

The scholarship, awarded for the first time in 1990, acknowledges the most academically talented minority students in Nebraska.

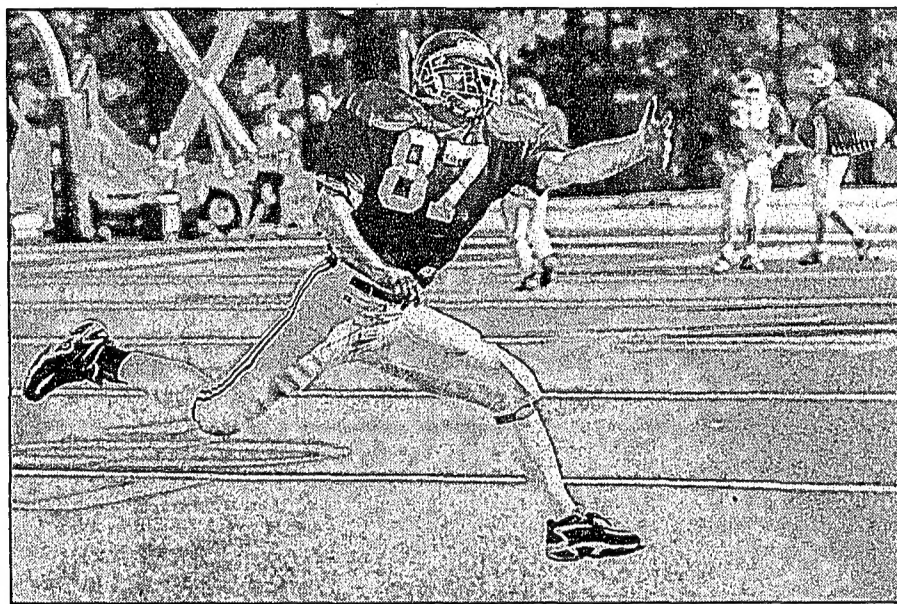

The following students received scholarships: Thor Bucy, Creighton Preparatory School; Sasha Chavez, Maria Henderson, and Tenaha Patterson, Bryan High School; Autumn Givehand and Malek Winfrey, North High School; and Maria Mayorga, South High School.

The Davis Scholarship began with a gift from the estate of Omaha businessman Rick Davis, who died of cancer in 1988, at the age of 43.

Davis was a UNO graduate, where he became well-known as an all-conference wide receiver on the Maverick football

National Magazine To Feature UNO Student

Jason Kuiper

Senior Staff Writer

UNO student Tina McNulty will be featured in the April issue of Muscle and Fitness magazine, for being a winner in the "Biggest Muscles on Campus" contest.

The magazine received over 600 entries from 70 percent of the nation with the most responses coming from California, Ohio and Arizona. The magazine recognizes college students with "brawn as well as brains." The goal of the feature is to improve a college student's lifestyle.

Winners were selected by a panel of exercise professionals who evaluated the background information and photographs, which contestants sent in, to determine a student who best represented the benefits of a healthy lifestyle of weight training, diet and a balanced outlook on life.

McNulty, one of 13 winners, said she has received nothing but positive feedback from people who have read the article.

"It's been great, people come up to me at the gym and congratulate me. Some people have even asked for my autograph," she said.

McNulty has been working out for over two years now, usually five or six times a week. Diet is a big part of her life too. McNulty said she rarely eats fast food and tries to live a healthy life. She said there are times when she may not feel like working out, but those times are few and far between.

Her main reason for entering the contest was to get recognition. McNulty hopes to start a portfolio, so she can get work as a fitness model. Her long term goal is to someday open and run her own gym.

"Girls come up to me and ask me what they should do to get started. That makes me feel good because fitness is definitely worth it. I wish more girls would get into it," McNulty said. "There are not many girls who compete in the fitness shows, that is something I would like to do."

For people just getting started in a workout program, McNulty said to start slow and be dedicated. "You really have to want to do it."

UNO Play Hits DC Theater

Tony Dreibus

News Editor

A UNO theater production was selected to perform next month at the Kennedy Center's Terrace Theater stage in Washington DC.

"All in the Timing," a full-length comedy directed by graduate student Kathy Bagby, was first performed at UNO in November. It was one of five plays out of about 36 entries selected in January to perform at the American College Theatre Festival's regional level in Ames, Iowa.

At regionals, "All in the Timing," written by David Ives in 1993, was presented to theater professionals, students, professors and designers from Nebraska, Kansas, Iowa, North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota, Missouri and Colorado.

To advance, the play had to be one of the six top productions in the nation. The department of dramatic arts received word March 1 that "All in the Timing" was one of those six, and would be performing at the Kennedy Center April 19 and 20.

Bagby, who picked the play for her thesis, said this is the first time a show from UNO has gone to the national level.

She picked the play because "it's so different, it's so unique," she said. "It's the kind of thing you don't normally see on a stage," said Bagby. "It's very funny, it draws a lot of references from Shakespeare, Kafka, from Trotsky, it's very intelligent. It's best for an educated audience, which is why it did so well at a university."

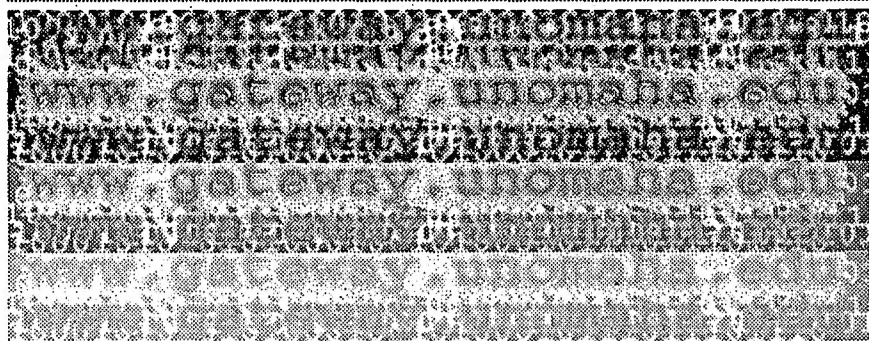

The production, which was first performed off-Broadway in New York, is a series of plays written between 1987 and 1993, then put together by Ives to make a full-length production, Bagby said.

"There's a lot of farce in it, a lot of wit," she said. "It plays with words, it plays with elements of time."

"It has a lot of weird elements in it that make it unique," she said.

The play has not only drawn attention for the production, but Bagby has been awarded a Director's Award, costume designer Lindsay Stang won an award for her designs, and Paul Pape won a scenic design award for the play.

A full-length dress rehearsal of "All in the Timing" will be performed Wednesday, April 14 in the Lied Performing Arts Center and is free to all who attend.

Stigma Still Placed on Mental Illnesses

Jay Saunders
Staff Writer

Crazy, wacked, loco, mental, stupid.

These are a few of the stereotypical words people have used to describe someone who suffers from a mental illness. Even though one in five people suffer, or will suffer at some point in their lives, from a mental illness, society still places a stigma on people who suffer from mental illnesses.

Mental illnesses are not the result of someone who is weak or feeble-minded as some may believe. In fact, many people who suffer from mental illnesses have little or no control over their suffering.

Empirical studies indicate there is a strong relationship between genetics and mental illness. It has also been found that several key neurotransmitters in the brain, such as serotonin or dopamine, play major roles in the causation of mental illnesses, such as depression, schizophrenia, and others.

As Jen Davis, a junior chemistry major correctly put it, "people with mental illnesses suffer from chemical imbalances in the brain that lead them to have behavior that doesn't parallel 'socially acceptable behavior.' These are things that may have been inherent in them since birth and can't be helped."

Ray Millimet, professor of psychology at UNO, said physical factors contribute to mental illnesses but they are not the sole culprit.

"Both genetic and environmental factors come into play when looking at the causes of mental illnesses," he said. "One cannot simply say it's one or the other; most of the time it's a combination of the two."

Accepting this may be difficult for those who hold on dearly to the Freudian theory, which is the notion that our past experiences shape our eccentric behavior.

"People with mental illnesses have to deal with the stigma that some people feel they're all completely insane and they all want to kill somebody," Padraic McElroy, a UNO freshman, said.

Although a little extreme, some people lacking knowledge about mental illnesses hold these views.

If the stigma surrounding mental illness is such a problem, then what is the solution?

One way to deal with this stigma, Millimet said, "is to educate people starting as young as children in grade school about mental illnesses and the people who suffer from them."

Davis said this problem should be dealt with on a more general level. "The media needs to portray them as not a sorry case or glamorize mental illnesses," she said. "They should just treat them like they are, normal people with a disease."

MAVA JAVA: UNO's Coffee Shop Delayed

will have couches, volume control speakers and a small stage for performances.

Whether or not the coffee house will follow the trends of cyber-cafes by having computers at students' disposal and staying open late, remains to be seen.

Although Mava Java is being created for the benefit of students, both Conway and Shradar said the coffee house will not be financed by student funds.

"If student center funds can't handle it, then student government can," Shradar said. "I've been assured by Guy that money is not a concern."

The furniture purchased for Mava Java is in the student government office. Sen. Scott Thomas said student government may purchase the furniture for their office.

UNO Celebrates National Women's History Month

Eve McLain
Staff Writer

Women's History Month didn't start as a declared observance from the U.S. Congress. It began by a meeting of the Education Task Force of the Sonoma County (California) Commission on the Status of Women in 1978.

The Commission declared "Women's History Week" the week of March 8, which is International Women's Day. The group instituted annual programs for a few dozen schools in California, along with an annual essay contest titled "Real Women" and a parade in downtown Santa Rosa, Calif.

This year, UNO observed National Women's History Month with commemorative posters displayed by women's studies students of Sandra Squire Ph.D., and a lecture last Friday by Princeton University sociologist Patricia Fernandez-Kelly Ph.D..

As part of her dissertation, Fernandez-Kelly joined what is commonly known as a sweat shop just over the Mexican border, to gain first hand knowledge of her subject. Now, twenty years later, she is a Princeton University professor, author and lecturer.

Her afternoon lecture at UNO Friday focused on export-processing zones and sweatshops on the U.S.-Mexican border and Asia along with why women have been preferred as sources of cheap labor. She also addressed the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) and its effect on women in the global workplace.

No matter how Women's History Month is celebrated from books on the topic to lectures, it has come a long way from one group of women looking for a way to enlighten students and raise the awareness of the general public.

The small celebration of women's history in California grew larger, when in 1979, members of the Commission were asked to participate in Women's History Institutes at Sarah Lawrence College. The institutes were attended by the national leaders of organizations for women and girls who, after hearing of the annual March celebrations in California, returned to their organizations and schools to initiate their own commemorations. They also agreed to support the efforts of the commission, to secure a congressional resolution declaring a "National Women's History Week."

In 1981, Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-UT) and Rep. Barbara Mikulski (D-MD) co-sponsored a Congressional Resolution to establish a country-wide Women's History Week. This resolution to support and encourage the nation's schools and communities to celebrate National Women's History Week was among resolutions already in effect from governors, city councils, and school boards across the country. "Maryland, Pennsylvania, New York, Oregon, Alaska, and other states developed and distributed curriculum materials to all of their public schools" reported the National Women's History Project's members.

In 1987, the National Women's History Week was expanded by congress to the entire month of March. The resolution, passed with bipartisan support in both the US House of Representatives and the US Senate, designates a month to this recognition and requests the President of the United States issue a proclamation each March in celebration of the time.

This year during his proclamation, President Clinton acknowledged the past contributions of women to the United States and gave thought for the future. In closing he said, "Women who have gone before us accomplished so much, often in the face of hardship and discrimination; we can only imagine what women will accomplish in the future if we break down the remaining barriers that prevent them from reaching their full potential."

In addition to his reflection and goals, Clinton fulfilled his obligation bestowed by the resolution to call upon the people of the United States to observe March with appropriate programs, ceremonies and activities.

Jealousy From Lincoln

Stephen Croucher
Columnist

I'm tired of it.

So many people in the Omaha and surrounding communities tell their children not to attend UNO, but to attend the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Many of these children take their parents, teachers, counselors and advise from others and attend UNL, only to return to Omaha and go to UNO.

Why is that?

Many students go to Lincoln and feel like nothing more than a number in a large crowd. Many of my friends spent some time at UNL and hated every minute of it.

Some students come to Omaha because they want to be taught by individuals who were or still are professionals in their fields, this is a vital aspect to a good education.

Some come to UNO because it is a developing school. Recent changes at UNO have made the past few years very exciting.

The addition of residence halls, UNO Maverick hockey and the new College of Information Science and Technology all bolstered UNO's prominence and prestige in the academic and Omaha communities.

However, this growth was not without its opponents.

For years the University of Nebraska and the University of Nebraska Board of Regents have been treating UNO and the University of Nebraska-Kearney like orphans in a colony of lepers.

"All new innovations and money go to UNL, because UNL needs it."

"What about UNO and UNK? Aren't we members of the University of Nebraska system?"

These attitudes and questions were the norm for years. Fortunately, people like Chancellor Nancy Belck and the rest of the administration at UNO have been fighting for UNO's rights.

When individuals from Lincoln were against UNO getting residence halls, these people fought for us.

Thank you,

Who cares if residence hall take students away from UNL?

They're still in the University of Nebraska system, right?

Who cares if UNO hockey encourages more people to attend UNO games? It's not killing UNL athletics, right?

Then there's the new College of Information Science and Technology. So many students who in the past had to go to UNL to get a solid education in technology and engineering, can now stay at UNO or transfer to UNO. This, of course, steps on UNL's toes. But who cares. Students are still in the same system, right?

Nebraska and especially UNL need to accept the fact that UNO is coming into its own. We, the UNO community, will no longer live in the shadows of UNL. It doesn't matter what UNL or other members of the University of Nebraska system do to hold us back, it won't work.

UNO is here to stay.

Capel Cottage Revue: What do you mean, audited?

"Taxation is not about devising wonderful programs to help the poor and the elderly, then raising money to pay for them. Taxation is about taking in all the money you can get away with, THEN deciding what to spend it on." —Sir Humphrey Appleby.

I filed my taxes, paid the IRS $200,000,000,000.62 and set back thinking it was all over for another year.

Mistake.

Got a call from my accountant, E.Z. Hutton, who told me I was being audited. He said he would really love to go with me to explain stuff, but he would be in Argentina for the next 20 years or so.

He also said I probably should have read over my tax forms before I signed them because "there might be questions."

"Questions?" I asked.

"They might ask how you got your parakeet a social security number and why you claimed him as a dependent."

"Is that illegal?"

"Uh...maybe," E.Z. said. "Look, President George Bush's dog Millie made over $890,000 in book royalties about eight years ago. Your parakeet didn't make squat. It's an equality issue. They might buy that."

"And if they don't?"

"Well...then they might want to see those $900 Italian suits."

"What $900 Italian suits?"

"The ones I wrote off as a business uniform for you, Dave. Maybe your editor will give you a note saying she required you to wear them while you wrote your column."

"Is there anything else?"

"There's the charity."

"What charity, E.Z.?"

"I had you declare yourself a new charitable foundation; donated a bunch of money to yourself, then wrote it off."

"You're kidding."

"And there's the IRA, of course."

"I gave you $2,000 to put in an IRA for me. I did get that deduction didn't I?"

"Oh sure, Dave. I gave you that $2,000 deduction. It's just that I really wasn't able to actually put the money into a fund for you."

"What?"

"I needed two grand for my ticket to Buenos Aires."

"You mean to tell me I'm going to jail forever and you're going to party in South America?"

"Not forever, Dave. They can only get you for federal offenses."

"Oh, I guess my state taxes were perfect then?"

"To tell you the truth, I took that money, too. Never did get around to filing your state taxes. Anyway, gotta go. Last call for boarding."

Free Verse With a Price

Jeremy Passer

Sometimes thinking of what to say is harder than it is to say. That's the breaks of trying to be a writer. On one side, you have this feeling of obligation to supply the reader with something new and exciting to input into their brains. But on the other side, you have the realization that you mustn't take the social responsibility of informing everyone on the beliefs you hold close to your heart. With that said, I am going to keep this article short. To do this, I am going to present you the reader with a poem I wrote last year, so you can have something new, take away what you want from this, and not have it shoved down your throat. So, here it is.

Today is a new day.

A day in which to imagine a new conspiracy. Of mass and total arcane proportions. Simply put, it's all a lie.

The world we live in, the invisible air we breath.

We examine and live each day of our own reality without ever considering those ideas, philosophies, and those worn out proverbs.

Doing what they do to survive.

Peasants are what we are and are likely to be. What we want is to be fill and occupied of our void.

That emptiness we so constantly try to fulfill. Movies, drugs, TV, radio, computer are what we turn to.

When time come to see what's inside we run. What are we running from? What is it that we are trying to avoid?

A hall of darkness waiting to explode.

The door is always open but you so desperately want it to close.

Close from everything that frightens, mystifies, confuses, and makes you think.

The pane glass door you look out is the future you see.

Untouched without fear of you.

You fear it though.

Actions speak volumes to your process of thought.

Watching windy nights blow away past fears and bring in new.

UNO students: "Where's Mava Java?"
Student President/Regent Jon Shrader: "It'll be here this fall. But, for now, this couch sure is comfortable!"

Letters To The Editor

Dear Editor,

The eye catching phrase "when life makes you choose between two life changing events, go with your heart" in the article written by Jeremy Passer, made me read his whole article.

It was very inspiring and impressive. Many college students have to make a lot of decisions in everyday life. A lot of us have defined college life as a time to freak out and have fun. I have heard many of my friends talking like, if we don't enjoy the life now we will regret later.

We decide what our true heart says, like Mr. Passer said in his article.

Aries (March 21-April 19).

The spotlight is on you Monday, so put on a good show. Neatness counts on Tuesday, too. Be gracious on Wednesday and Thursday, and you'll have more offers than you can accept. Hold your temper Friday through the weekend, especially if somebody's trying to get you to lose it.

Taurus (April 20-May 20).

Be there for a loved one who needs you on Monday and Tuesday. Wednesday and Thursday you can focus on work again. From Friday through the weekend, follow your partner's lead.

Gemini (May 21-June 21).

Offer support to a friend under pressure on Monday and Tuesday. Romance is complicated, but worth it on Wednesday and Thursday. Looks like you get to work this weekend, starting on Friday.

Cancer (June 22-July 22).

You're under stress all week from a demanding boss, but on Monday and Tuesday, your attention to detail gets you favorable reviews. Wednesday and Thursday are hectic. Keep your priorities straight. Friday through the weekend looks pretty good for love, once you get the work out of the way.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22).

Put your money down on travel or education Monday or Tuesday. Wednesday and Thursday, your best bet is to support a gentle friend. On Friday through the weekend, you'll be best off staying home. Looks like there's plenty for you to do there.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22).

You're strong on Monday and Tuesday and that's good, because there's pressure to be perfect. Wednesday and Thursday, the money should start coming in, much to your delight. From Friday through the weekend you get to learn by doing. Looks like it'll be fun.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23).

You're under pressure Monday and Tuesday to do things exactly right. Put in the effort. On Wednesday and Thursday, you're drawing lots of positive attention. Make the most of it. Friday through Sunday, the money could finally come in. Make that your intention.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 21).

Push your team Monday and Tuesday and they'll do better than ever before. Don't be slowed down by an indecisive bureaucrat on Wednesday or Thursday. Make the decision for him or her. You're the brains behind the operation from Friday through Sunday. Tell the others what to do and keep on them until they do it.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21).

Be as perfect as possible on Monday and Tuesday and you'll gain valuable rewards. You can relax a little Wednesday and Thursday as friends and lovers vie for your attention. From Friday through the weekend, your best bet is to keep a low profile. Steer clear away from the warring factions.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19).

Looks like company is coming Monday and Tuesday. You'd better be ready for them. Help the boss make a big decision Wednesday and Thursday and you'll have lots more time to play with your friends over the weekend, starting on Friday.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18).

Money spent on education is a good investment, especially Monday and Tuesday. Look further away to find what you need on Wednesday and Thursday, and you can get a friend to help you solve a big problem over the weekend.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20).

Money is coming in Monday and Tuesday. Hold onto it. Wednesday and Thursday are better days for shopping anyway. Follow a friend's hunch. This would be a great weekend to go fishing, starting on Friday. You'll have a great time whether they're biting or not, especially in an old, familiar place.

Planning a comfortable future takes patience and an understanding of the long-term nature of retirement investing. But who can resist a little bit of immediate gratification now and then?

While past performance is no guarantee of future results, TIAA-CREF's investment experts seek high returns over the long term, at risk levels appropriate for building future security.

Investment markets are, of course, volatile and the CREF accounts are variable annuities that are not guaranteed. That's why many people choose to diversify with the TIAA Traditional Annuity. It guarantees principal and interest, backed by TIAA's claims-paying ability, and provides opportunities for added growth through dividends.

Other numbers to think about: With over $200 billion in assets and 2 million participants, we're the largest retirement organization in the world, and the leading choice in higher education and research.

For over 80 years, we've pioneered new and better ways to help you build a comfortable future. If this all sounds good to you, there's one more number to consider: 1 800 842-2776. Call us to learn how our expertise can work to your advantage - today and tomorrow.

SCHOLARSHIP: Minority Award Winners Announced

Rick Davis' brother, Dick Davis, who was a graduate and football stand-out at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, conceived a plan to build his brother's initial gift of $50,000 into a major gift endowment in support of minority scholarships for students attending or desiring to attend UNO, UNL, the University of Nebraska Medical Center (UNMC) or the University of Nebraska-Kearney (UNK).

Dick Davis was able to raise an additional amount from family and friends, the University of Nebraska Foundation and the Nebraska Legislature.

Even though the scholarship was intended to assist minority students attending universities in Nebraska, it was also hoped the recipients of the scholarship would serve as role models for future Davis scholars.

UNO freshman Maria Mayorga feels she is a role model in the sense that she is setting an example for her family and friends, especially her sister who is still in high school.

"Since I received the scholarship, my sister has been more enthusiastic about attending college, especially since I am the first one in my family to further my education," Mayorga said.

Many feel the programs the scholarship offers are helpful to its recipients, who are first time students.

"The programs that meet with other scholarship recipients are helpful, since I am a first year student," Mayorga said.

The Master Success Program, which meets bimonthly, has speakers who discuss tips on time management, study skills and career planning.

"I feel that the Master Success Program is helpful because it gives me a solid basis to start out with as a freshman. I think it will guide me through my college career," Freshman Malek Winfrey said.

The Davis Scholarship is recognized as one of the university's most prestigious awards because of its importance to its recipients.

The scholarship is important because the directors are always available for help in classes or just for advice, Winfrey said.

The Davis Scholarship Program is intended to be more than just a mechanism for helping minority students attend college, but also an encouragement to become successful members of their business professional communities with intent to help others achieve the same success in their career and education interests.

Students Sign Up For Graduation Guarantee

College Press Exchange

MACOMB, Ill. — With costs escalating at many colleges and universities across the country, Western Illinois University has joined a growing number of schools that have implemented an aggressive strategy to lure and keep students.

The university was the first public school in the nation to promise that anyone who signs up for its stringent GRADTRAC program will graduate in four years. If anyone who meets all of the program's requirements fails to get what he or she needs to graduate in four years, the school will foot the bill for any classes that are left. Students participating in the program must take 15 to 16 credit hours each semester, pass their classes and meet with an academic adviser.

The program is supposed to help students hold down their college costs and get them out into the working world as soon as possible. According to Karen Helmers, director of admissions at WIU, less than 50 percent of the nation's college students graduate in four years. Most stay five, she said. It is a trend she wants to prevent from growing.

Programs similar to GRADTRAC are beginning to pop up on other campuses. Central Michigan University in Mount Pleasant, Mich., also guarantees graduation in four years.

And if that's not enough, WIU is also planning to offer to freshmen and transfer students entering this fall a guarantee that locks tuition and other costs in at the same rate throughout the four years that it takes to get a degree.

Gates Tells Students To Urge Employers To Get Digital

College Press Exchange

WASHINGTON - Bill Gates, Microsoft Corp. chairman and techie extraordinaire, is urging college students to encourage their future employers to get with the digital age to improve their businesses.

Gates, who appeared at Georgetown University on March 24 to promote his new book, told students they could help their supervisors run operations more efficiently by steering them away from most paper documents and toward the electronic storage of information.

To make his point, Gates described how his staff presented him with binders filled with copies of every paper form his company used, from purchase approvals to benefits requests.

"I did something only a CEO really can do," he said. "I said, 'Get rid of them.' In fact, the only ones we have left are the ones we have to fill out and send to the government."

Entering data into computers helps employees work more efficiently in a variety of ways - whether that means making sales figures available online or producing in seconds flat a complete list of every interaction a company has had with a particular customer, Gates said.

"Students lead the way," he said. "It's really students who are driving into this business."

Gates predicts that the next major high-tech advances will be in wireless networks, smaller-sized computers, speech recognition programs and software that lets people collaborate on electronic documents. He also cited figures showing that 153 million people worldwide, including 87 million in the United States and Canada, use the Internet at least for e-mail. He predicted a decade will pass before most people hop online.

School Pulls Plug On Radio Show After Students Read From Salinger Novel

College Press Exchange

DE PERE, Wis. — A couple of students at St. Norbert College said they were kicked off the air after they read eight pages from The Catcher in the Rye during their weekly campus radio show.

Murray McGough and Christopher Danczyk, both students enrolled at the Roman Catholic school, said the director of campus security showed up in the radio station's studios a little more than an hour into their two-hour, March 4 broadcast, ordering them to sign off. The pair said the officer told them a college priest had complained about their use of offensive language on the air and that school officials had instructed him to yank them off the air.

School officials confirmed that someone was dispatched to the station after a caller complained that the broadcast - which could be heard only on campus - contained obscene language, but they insist they didn't pull the plug on the show.

McGough and Danczyk said they read passages from J.D. Salinger's famous - and oft-censored - novel because they wanted to try something new. To protest the school's actions, the two students devoted their next show to reading sex-related passages from the Bible.

Underwater Archaeology Students Do Their Best Work Beneath The Surface

College Press Exchange

A good 50 feet below the surface is the green, murky outline of a ship, its engine covered in moss.

The deeper the diver goes, the more personal the experience gets. Silverware, binoculars and hair combs are haunting reminders of the lives claimed and history made here.

"It's an interactive museum," said Jeff Gray, an underwater archaeologist for the State Historical Society of Wisconsin.

More than 700 of these underwater displays are documented in the state's historical records - making Wisconsin and the waters surrounding it one of the best places in the world to view shipwrecks.

Only two universities in North America - East Carolina University in Greenville, N.C., and Texas A&M in College Station - offer degrees in underwater archaeology. Students from both schools have traveled to the Midwest, of all places, to learn more about the subject.

"Underwater archaeology exposes you to so much, because no two wrecks are alike," said Fillipo Roca, a graduate student at ECU who is currently working with the historical society to explore the sunken 212-foot barge, Selah

Chamberlain. "You're always learning."

People who don't think of Wisconsin as a maritime state should stop to consider that it's surrounded by water, Gray said. Waterways were critical to the state's development in the 1800's and early 1900's because they were the cheapest and fastest ways to move freight.

With all sorts of crafts trying to maneuver the same passages, accidents were bound to happen.

Lake Superior, Lake Michigan, and the Mississippi River serve as icy graves for schooners, steamboats, Native American canoes, fur-trading posts, lumbering and ice-harvesting sites, quarries, and harbors that bustled up to 150 years ago.

The cold, fresh water now engulfing them acts as a natural deep-freeze that has preserved wooden and metal ship hulls. The boats' contents - including clothing, equipment, food and even paper and human remains - provide small portholes into life aboard a ship in days long past.

The best way to study underwater archaeology is for students to see it for themselves, said Bradley Rodgers, a professor of maritime studies who has led several ECU undergraduates to the icy waters of Wisconsin.

"The real value of the field school is to learn history and add to history," he said.

But studying underwater archaeology can be an experience far less pleasant than anything seen on a Jacques Costeau special. The Great Lakes' water temperature can drop to nearly freezing.

"One day it was snowing when we came out of the water,"

Rodgers said.

How far a shipwreck lies below the water's surface determines how long divers can stay under to explore it. When a wreck is 100 feet below, divers can stay underwater for only 15 minutes at a time. It's feasible that in one full day, only one hour of actual diving takes place.

In shallow water, divers can stay beneath the surface for four hours at a time.

The time limits make mapping a 200-foot schooner that is scattered across the bottom of a lake a long and difficult process.

"But sometimes it seems like the more adverse the conditions, the better you come out as a team," Rodgers said.

ECU is working with the Wisconsin historical society and the Underwater Wisconsin Archaeology Association to conduct research and to maintain the state's underwater museums for recreational and educational purposes.

Together, they have created the Maritime Trails program. With help from student divers, the program produces waterproof cards to help visiting divers locate the precise points of various shipwrecks. The cards also provide information about underwater visibility, the wreck's archaeological significance and history behind the shipwreck.

Volunteers for the Trails program also report newfound shipwrecks and any thefts of artifacts. Underwater archaeologists believe hundreds of shipwrecks are waiting to be discovered.

Student Dies During Pick-Up Basketball Game

College Press Exchange

PRINCETON, N.J. - A Princeton University student collapsed and died while playing a pick-up game of basketball on campus last week.

Matthew Weiner, 17, of Medford, N.J., was pronounced dead of what doctors at the Medical Center of Princeton said was sudden cardiac arrest.

Weiner, a freshman, was on the university's swim team. His death came as an awful surprise to friends and roommates who described him as "one of the most fit people you've ever met."

"He was very concerned with staying in shape," roommate Tim Szostek said.

Mavs Roll up Yards on Gridiron

CM Chris Machlan

No. 32 Andrew Thompson awaits the ball's arrival as No. 7 Demond Finister tries to make the tackle at a recent Maverick scrimmage at Al F. Caniglia field.

Andy Nordmeier
Sports Editor

The Maverick football team held its first spring scrimmage Friday and turned in numbers reminiscent of mid-season form.

The Maverick offensive machine gained 645 yards in the scrimmage, 443 of them on the ground. Running backs Adam Wright and Jess Holland each scored touchdowns.

Holland led all rushers with 75 yards on six carries, his longest being a 51-yard run. Sophomore Matt Beachey, who saw limited time last season, had the day's longest play, when he scampered for a 70-yard gain. Beachey finished with 73 yards on two carries.

Junior college transfer and quarterback hopeful Kwanzi Watts racked up 74 yards in his first Maverick scrimmage.

If the battle for the quarterback position came down to the passing game, it would be a tight race.

Curtis Miller, the senior who was Ed Thompson's primary understudy last year, led the way with a one-of-four passing effort for 19 yards. Seth Turman, who saw a few snaps in games last year completed a pass for four yards. Watts' completion went for minus one yard.

The quarterback hopeful who had the roughest day was sophomore Brian Spangler. None of Spangler's three passes were completed and he had a net of -18 yards rushing on seven carries. One of those runs was a 10-yard loss that ended when defensive end Chris Cooper buried Spangler. Cooper and Spangler used to be teammates at Lincoln Southeast.

The Mavericks will be working out Monday through Friday of this week and have a second scrimmage scheduled for Friday afternoon. The annual spring game is set for April 17 at 1 p.m.

Ladies Sweep in Kearney

Andy Nordmeier
Sports Editor

What could stop the Maverick softball team from continuing its hot play at the University of Nebraska-Kearney Tournament in Kearney, Neb. over the weekend?

The answer wasn't Wayne State and it wasn't the team from New Mexico Highlands either.

The Mavericks swept all three games played Saturday and improved the team record to 18-4 on the season.

The Mavericks met up with in-state rival Wayne State and when the game ended Wayne State was left on the short end of a 6-0 final.

The Mavericks scored all the runs needed, when UNO put two on the board in the bottom of the first. The lead swelled to 5-0 after four innings, as the Mavericks scored three runs in the fourth. UNO added an insurance run in the fifth and left Wayne State not feeling too excellent about the outcome.

Senior hurler Tara Buzzell showed Wayne State it was not worthy against the Mavericks, by holding Wayne State to two hits on the game.

Kelsey Duckworth and Jill Peterson each hit doubles in the win, while center fielder Jenny Redlinger smacked her second home run of the season.

The Mavericks made the squad from New Mexico Highlands feel rather low after beating the team twice in a six-hour span.

In game one, the Mavericks trounced the Highlands 8-1. The key to victory was the six-run third inning that broke open the game and erased the 1-0 deficit the Mavericks faced.

The Mavericks used just eight hits to score the

Two of the three baseball teams with "University of Nebraska" as part of their name got together Wednesday afternoon at Buck Belzer Field.

All hyperbole aside, with all of the publicity the record setting University of Nebraska-Lincoln Cornhuskers have received since violating Chicago State, by scoring 50 runs in six innings, UNO had to feel a little more spurned than usual as they took the field.

But for about half the game, the Mavs matched the big bad Huskers play for play and staked themselves to an early lead going into the bottom of the fourth inning.

But UNO wasn't able to keep up the high level of play and couldn't stop the bleeding, losing 15-2 to the Big 12 conference-leading Big Red.

UNO's lead-off hitter, John

Shoemaker, set the tone by hitting a rope back through the box for a single to start the game. But UNO came up empty when the Huskers flipped a pair to end the inning.

The Maverick defense shined in the bottom of the first. Center fielder Adam Ford made two running catches in left-center field to snare line drives and pitcher Brent Rasmussen struck out Dan Cowan with two runners in scoring position to end the inning.

In UNO's second Coach Gates showed his aggressive managing style by giving catcher, Brad Prokupek the steal sign to get him into scoring position with two down. It was Prokupek's first theft attempt of the season and last year had only one attempt on the season.

Prokupek also starred in the bottom of the second, as he cut down a Husker base runner to end Nebraska's second frame.

The Mavs broke through in the top of the fourth, by taking advantage of Husker miscues.

Mike Haynes walked, Prokupek was plunked by a pitch and Steve Synowicki walked to load the bases. Justin Siebler came through with UNO's only hit of the inning plating Haynes. Finally Prokupek scored on a passed ball to make the score 2-0.

Then UNO's clock struck midnight.

In the bottom of the fourth, UNO was its own worst enemy. A throwing error on a sacrifice bunt attempt loaded the bases. Next with no room for error Rasmussen issued three free passes to fall behind 3-2. Another Husker scored on a fielders choice and two more errors allowed the Huskers to take a 6-2 advantage.

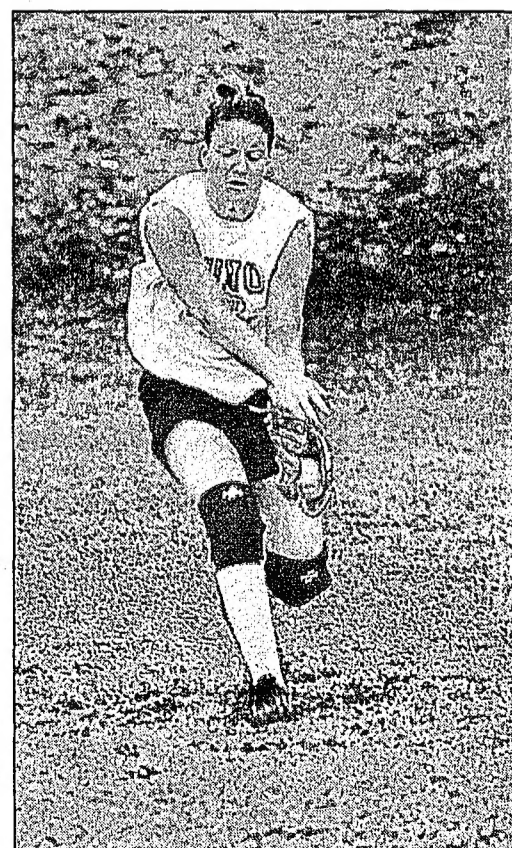

The Mavs were unable to generate any offense the rest of the way, as Nebraska used three pitchers to shut the Mavs down. Hard-throwing R.D. Spiehs picked up the win for the Huskers.

Prospective College Student Feels Like Just a Number

College Press Exchange

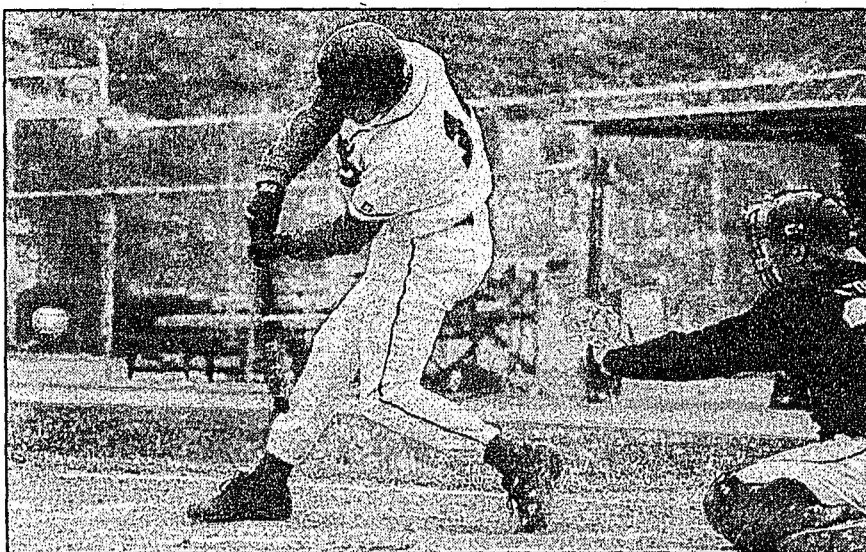

TEMPE, Ariz. - So maybe you've felt like little more than a number on your campus for years. Here's proof that you may be right.

The parents of Truman Bradley, a soon-to-be college student from Boulder, Colo., recently received a letter from Arizona State University that began: "Congratulations on 098-76-5432's admission." (The number used in this story has been changed.)

The letter, addressed to Truman's father, Jeff Bradley, went on to say that as a parent "you will be a partner with the university in encouraging 098-76-5432 to succeed."

The father wasted little time sending back a note of his own: "Thank you for offering our son, 098-76-5432, or as we affectionately refer to him around the house - 098 - a position in the ASU class of 2003. His mother, 123-45-6MOM and I are very happy ..."

University officials said the impersonal correspondence was caused by a computer glitch that affected several thousand letters sent to prospective students. The letters containing student's Social Security numbers, not their names, were supposed to have been discarded, but were mailed instead.

CM Chris Machlan

BASEBALL: UNO Struggles Against UNL

The Huskers used a two-out rally to score two runs in the fifth, making the score 8-2 after five innings.

Adam Ford relieved Rasmussen (1-3) in the sixth inning whom without the errors would have had a much better fate. Ford was hit hard giving up five hits and seven runs in one inning of work.

And when a line drive crashed into Ford late in the game it was apparent, the Omaha nine was spent and the 12-run rule came into effect ending the game after UNO batted in the top of the seventh with the score 15-2.

Starting pitching was the key in a doubleheader split with the Wayne State Wildcats Saturday in Omaha.

In the opener, Wildcat left-hander Brady Borner spun a four-hit shutout while striking out six. UNO's Nick Carlson (1-1) took the loss but pitched well. The transfer from Madison Junior College went the distance giving up only three runs while scattering five hits and striking out seven Wildcats.

Mike Haynes went 1-for-2 with a walk to generate the most off Wayne State's crafty lefty.

"Borner threw hard but kept us off balance with off-speed stuff," Rasmussen said.

Jeff Hirschbrunner (1-1) contributed a strong pitching performance and UNO's leading hitter Pete Englund provided the offense in gaining the split.

Englund went 3-for-3 raising his average to .444 and Mark Lehman added two RBI's.

The Mavs raised the team's record to 5-10 with the split. UNO had a doubleheader scheduled at Wayne State Sunday and has a road contest at Northwest Missouri State Tuesday at 2:30 p.m.

eight runs and again Redlinger chipped in with a double, her second extra base hit of the day.

Pitcher Michelle Manthei picked up the win and is still perfect at 9-0 on the season, as of press time.

In game two against the Highlands, it was a closer affair, but the Mavericks squeezed out a 2-1 win.

Like game one, the Highlands held a 1-0 lead in the third inning but the Mavericks scored twice in the fourth to take the lead at 2-1. Buzzell started the game for the Mavericks but was pulled in favor of Manthei who came on and nailed down the game to record her first save of the season.

The Mavericks were scheduled to play the University of Nebraska-Kearney, (20-0) and conference rival North Dakota State Sunday, but results were not available as of press time.

The Mavericks will play South Dakota in a twinbill today in Vermillion, S.D. as part of the North Central Conference season. Tomorrow marks the team's home opener when they'll play two with Wayne State at College World Series Park. The first pitch is scheduled for 4 p.m.

IN A MISGUIDED ATTEMPT TO KEEP UP WITH THE REST OF THE ENTERTAINMENT INDUSTRY, THE CREATOR OF THIS COMIC PANEL SIGNS A FEW "PRODUCT PLACEMENT" DEALS...

International mime artist Yass Hakoshima uses perfect physical control and imagination to combine the intensity of Japanese Noh Theatre, the drama of classical mime and the athletic elements of American modern dance. His is an art form of remarkable purity and power with both social and psychological themes.
